Getting to PEI

There are several ways to get to Prince Edward Island. You can drive across the Confederation Bridge from New Brunswick, take a ferry ride from Nova Scotia, or fly into the Charlottetown airport. Note that there is no fee to enter the Island by bridge or boat, however there is a fee to leave.

Northumberland Ferries Ltd. (NFL) is a 75 minute ferry trip that runs across the Northumberland Strait between Wood Islands, Prince Edward Island and Caribou, Nova Scotia The approximate fee is $43 for a car or truck. To book online or get more information click here. Reservations are recommended.

The Confederation Bridge joins the eastern Canadian provinces of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. The curved, 12.9 kilometre (8 mile) long bridge is the longest in the world crossing ice-covered water, and continues to be one of Canada's top engineering achievements to date. The fee for leaving the Island is $20. For more information click here.
